INTRODUCTION

Tyrant are everywhere. They are more in females as compared to males. This expedition is a courtesy of the various ancient kings, queens and chiefs that I studied and pursued divine revelations on.

To keep a tyrant at bay, you need to understand how they function in regards to their game plan. All tyrants know that rebels have a price and a weakness.

Unbreakable unity is formed by a universal conviction to a greater love agenda .Human goodwill is a love letter angels blush over and God Almighty smiles at.

Tyrants are not just leaders who misuse power for evil agendas, they are completely sold to the destruction of humanity and they belong to secret societies of lawlessness where they called themselves “Gods and goddesses of the Earth” in their own foolish presumptions.

However brief the book maybe, keep in mind the love invested in it as a token of help in your search for understanding, wisdom and knowledge. I would not have completed this expedition without the constant torment of opposing spirits and the continuous divine protection offered to me by God Almighty.

Abundance shuts leaders up

There was a time where we had drought and we were told to use water wisely. Now our dams are full beyond capacity - no one speaks about water conservation.

Every matter will cease from being addressed as soon as the complaints stomachs are filled to their selfish capacities.

Tyrants get the praise of being good leaders especially when the influencing people of the society are well-taken care off by tyrants. Influential leaders in society are the regulators of revolts or revolutions. If you are a tyrant, you silence them through abundance and keep them loyal to you.

Leaders of revolts and revolutions are like remote controls in the hands of tyrants. These leaders will organise marches, using the genuine concerns of the people to draw support just to have meetings with tyrants. In those meetings, a plan on how to silence the people will be adopted and executed without delay. Many revolting organisations and movements are just momentum creators for tyrants to validate and weigh their controlling powers.

Cause confusion

Tyrant hate the unity of the people and their main goal is to confuse the common language. It is the language the people speak that embraces the mind-set and heart they have in their agreement. In every revolution organized, tyrants are likely to cause confusion amongst the prominent and influential leaders. Tyrants use misinformation, character assassinations and money to confuse and to separate the unity of the people.

Confusion scatters a revolution and a rebellion against the tyrant. If your leading leaders have undisciplined appetites for money and power. They are your weakest links in any struggle.

Always few steps ahead of a revolt

Understand that even within your camp are people who are forever loyal to tyrants. They are paid-well and lucratively taken care to forever deliver information to tyrants. It will do you well as a group or organisation to leave a lot of details out especially in your plan of attack because tyrants will know. Tyrants reward people that give them valuable information always.

Tyrants do not fuel a rebellion or a revolt if they are not going to win against the multitudes. They always have the leaders of those rebellions or evolutions on their balls. These leaders either sell-out or they are killed if they refuse to sell-out.

Tyrants don't go down alone

These guys do not go down alone whenever they are on the wrong side of the law or when they going to be killed by their enemies. Everyone that has enabled a tyrant goes down with that tyrant. Partnering with a tyrant unfortunately is a lifetime covenant. You will however inherit his enemies and you will also inherit his “Blessers”.

Tyrants keep evidence that will implicate you in their downfall. If they don't take you down with them, they will blackmail you to support them when they are down and out.

Tyrants apply advice without thought

Even the mighty Pharaoh took advice every time Moses came forward to challenge him. Tyrants consult many spiritual practitioners and intellectuals whenever they are faced with a challenge.

Tyrants have a tendency of applying all the advices they receive at once. Pharaoh freed the Israelites and then chased after them in pursuit to kill them. Do not be fooled by the good decision made by tyrant. Remember that he also made the opposing decision too so do not rejoice when a tyrant favours you because he's on his way to kill you.

Test and require loyalty

Tyrants however as evil as they are , test and require loyalty from their servants. They also force people to serve them especially if those people are capable of carrying out functions that will stabilize the tyrant's reign. If they cannot buy you with money to serve them, they will hold you by the balls and threaten to kill people that are dear to you if you persist in your refusal. Fear and money are tools to keep their servants faithful and loyal to them.

Womanize and molest

Tyrants have an unquenchable sexual desires. To quench their sexual drives, they use their money and power to draw women into their bedrooms. Tyrant have wandering eyes and they want to devour every beautiful woman that they see before them.

Like clergyman, tyrants have an appetite to molest young boys who they find to have feminine sexual appeals. To hide their molesting tendencies, they often compensate their victims largely, abandoned them in a foreign country or kill them then offer to bury them as they sympathize with the boys' families.

Tyrants are very dishonest

Tyrants may look truthful and honest but they're actually lying to you. Just like the apartheid government playing victim to the United States and Great Britain during a time where they were oppressing black people in South Africa. Tyrants twist the truth to win favour just to gain benefits for themselves regardless of who suffers in the process. They use dishonesty to gain favour at the expense of the real victims.

Tyrants will always distort information for their own gain even if they do it eloquently just for them to mislead people and to deviate from the true narrative.

Tyrants are image-mongers

Nobody in the world pays PR agencies like people who have bad characters and those who are involved in bad business practices. In order to create a preferable and profitable image of themselves, tyrant play the victim in all situations and never really account for anything that they've messed up themselves. Even the newspapers today are businesses that are constantly sold to the highest paying tyrant in pushing a particular propaganda of themselves.

#10

Brilliant negotiating skills

Tyrants are brilliant negotiators. They gave our people political freedom and kept economic power with some crumbs of that economic power given to veterans in secret.

These guys are Illusionists of note, eloquent speakers that hypnotise the intoxicated minds of trusted leaders. They always strive to have an upper hand and the big cut in every deal.

Brainwashers of note

It is often said that, “A book written by the hunter will always magnify the hunter more than the lion that killed the hunter at the end”. Africa's history is not written by African people. African spirituality has been altered and edited and decided on by councils that are not even African, to teach Africans. It is not a mistake that the Bible has been compiled into just 66 books where else there were more books that were thrown to the bin. The council that sat to decide which books were worthy to be compiled had a goal and a mission to push particular narratives. Throughout history our information has been distorted to create favourable pictures of the oppressors. At some point they made us learn and speak their language so that they could discover easily our plans to revolt against them.

They told our fore father's to sell their cattle and land so that our parents may have qualifications that keep us enslaved to jobs that they've created for us. Private education was a means to take the generational wealth from our fore fathers. Cattles multiply but a qualification kept in a file cannot be inherited even by one's children, nephews and nieces. We converted cattle to paper and they converted paper to cattle. Unwarily, we sold the inheritance of our children's children that the land gave us.

Tyrants flooded Africa with their literature, made their culture superior so much that Africans dropped their own traditions and customs in pursuit to be white. They understood that in order to do away with the African narrative, they had to infuse theirs in what they called the educational system and religious institutions. The best noble way to bring in an educational system was through the religious institutions. It was religion that got our people submissive throughout their oppression - The Christian religion to be in exact.

They boss instead of lead

Tyrants order and command others around. Many of them are very insecure even though they give task to team players. Soon or later they want to dictate on how the task is going to be done. All the functions in the organisations they lead are dictated by them. Tyrants do not give team players the liberty to execute tasks freely and creatively so. In pursuit to get team players to fulfil the task at hand, tyrants will manipulate psychological resources at their disposal to force fear and loyalty in their team players.

Exploit labour

Tyrants will look for skilled and gifted people for functions that they need performed but they will not pay these experts either on time or not at all.

Tyrants love the finer things in life and beautiful architecture but they will not pay the skilled men who do the work very well. They are well-equipped to create unnecessary excuses not to pay people for their work. Some of these tyrants will use religion as a means to manipulate those who've rendered services to them.

Tyrants mercilessly covet and take the little, the poor have then call it “Business”. They have no compassion at all.

Tyrants will always position themselves at the receiving end in any deal where they even make more than the people who've worked hard to finish the job at hand.

#14

Minimal givers

Tyrants do not give generously instead they give sparingly . The giving of a tyrant is a mockery towards God and himself. He or she gives in such a way that the poor are never independent from him or her. He or she gives to the poor to gain control over them and to always have them at his or her mercy. The greatest curse of the poor is to accept help from tyrants for they will certainly repay him/her for every piece of bread that tyrant gave them.

Calculate carefully what you eat from a tyrant's table. Place a fork on your throat to discipline your appetite otherwise you will be a slave to him/her forever. Moderately eat and drink before a tyrant's table otherwise your appetite will always be gauged by him or her. Tyrants understand that money is power and power is the control of the minds and hands of people into achieving his/her objectives.

Tyrants are highly abusive

You can never run away from this quality when it comes to tyrants. Tyrants are emotionally and physically abusive. To tyrants other humans are just utensils, good for their use.

Tyrants carefully study where to really abuse a person. If you are emotionally vulnerable, they will take advantage of you emotionally and if you are rebellious, they will exercise physical abuse to tame you into their framework.

In most cases, physical abuse from tyrants stream from their short temperedness as a result of poor emotional intelligence but mostly because they want to display superiority over others.

Tyrants are masters of disguise

When tyrants want to find out information about someone or something, they will take on to disguise themselves as beggar or as a simple strangers belonging to a belief expressed in a one's particular attire just to be near the target.

In a nutshell, tyrants will seek to know almost everything about a person they are interested in or who is interested in them without being noticed. Tyrants pay well for information.

Tyrants always seek to outsmart their opponents and people they're interested in. They collect visual and audio data on their wives, children and subjects. They have external agents working for them who aren't easily noticed. The data collected will be used as blackmail in holding the above people at ransom and in enforcing loyalty to themselves.

Tyrants hide their weaknesses

The weakness of any man is his children . Many tyrants hide their children from being exposed to how they operate until those children are grown enough to accept that they are children of a tyrant.

A tyrant will surrender everything once he or she is captured by the balls.

In some cases, tyrants buy other people's children to pose as their own while they hide their real children from the public space, let alone even change their children's nationality and names to protect them in case of an attack. Many princes and princesses are hired while others aren't even the biological children of the tyrant. Real successors do not normally grow near the throne. Tyrants go to an extent of disowning their children publicly for pathetic reasons in pursuit to deviate their enemies focus.

Tyrants do not attack or ill-treat people without hiding their weaknesses very well. A queen is not necessary the first wife of a tyrant and a successor is mostly raised in the mist of his people as their equal.

#18

Misuse position-power

The most corrupt man is always a ruler and a governor of the people. Why? People who are best suited to enable corruption are always put in power. Tyrants abuse authority given to them, they take bribes and sell their people to the highest colonial bidder.

Tyrants will do whatever it takes to get to a higher position as they envy their predecessors long before their terms are even over. A prince will plot to kill the King always.

There is corruption in Africa because African leaders are corrupt to the core. If you ask me? Tyrants are regulators of hell on earth.

The stupidity of tyrants is centred on violating the oaths they make in God's name. If the laws are put in place by a tyrant. Those laws will be for the people not necessarily the tyrant.

#19

Tyrants are lawless

The foolishness of tyrants is to forever deem themselves as “God” although their territories span only for a few hundred metres. These idiots are a clear mockery to themselves.

Tyrant have an exaggerated view of themselves that is fuelled by the praises of their subjects, alliances and women.

These fools are forever compelled to act in their worst evil. There is no error these dumbfounded rulers will not commit. If they're ever gracious to you, do not be glad or comfortable for they are up to no good at all.

“Good” to tyrants is a tool to achieve evil ends.

Economic power increases defence and alliance

Tyrants make a lot of enemies because of their endless contempt. In order to counter attack the large number of enemies they have. Tyrants exploit people and resources in all possible ways, be it in the production that enables the purchase of weapons and allows them to form alliances with rulers that have strong military forces. They use economic power, that is fundraised from the enslavement of their people to buy support .Economic power secures and protects a tyrant throughout his reign.

Tyrants colonize

Tyrants are colonially minded to a point whereby they consider colonizing their weaker alliances. You are only an alliance to a tyrant for a specific benefit and for a certain season. Sooner or later you will become the main enemy as the tyrant who was your friend will form alliance with your enemies to take you down.

You never get to see a tyrant at first through the naked eye as they come to the rescue and assistance in your desperate situation. Tyrants set themselves to be of great importance as you give them some power in your territory which only fuels their aggression to want to take over completely.

Tyrants will study you fully and seek to help your vulnerabilities which are the basis for their total take over.

African Chiefs were outsmarted by the British. The British presented themselves as those offering peace and those offering good help. Together with the local chiefs' enemies they planned the ultimate takedown of good rulers in the African land in which they were successful in.

Tyrants do not form Alliance with leaders they cannot take down or eliminate completely. They are likely to ensure their betrayal by forming new alliances through deception.

Should a tyrant want to form alliance with you. You must know that you are the target as you have something that they want.

Through your alliance together, the assistance of a tyrant is strategic.

Indoctrination through the educational support from a tyrant is evident. The adoption of the tyrant's language as claimed to be universal is itself a tactic to colonize. It will be his mode of morals and manner of attire which will be rendered as decent civilization.

When you wake up, you will realise that the alliance you formed with a tyrant was actually the death of you and your people. It was never with good intentions at all.

Tyrants induce fear

Tyrants understand the use of psychology more than anything. Fear is a means that tyrant use to derive devotion and compliance.

Since tyrants control the media, they build a reputation of themselves as individuals not to be reckoned with.

These cruel leaders banish and pay rebel to disappear so that people may claim that the tyrant has killed the rebels while the actual truth is that the rebellious heroes sold-out and moved to a foreign land.

Tyrants will seek to take glory for the natural disasters that coincidentally happened to rebels such as being struck by lightning and the mysterious deaths that happen in the rebel's family. It will be commonly noted amongst the people that the tyrant is not to be disobeyed otherwise such curses may fall on you. Worse is when the tyrant actually does kill and use dark spirits to induce fear thus, many tyrants are occultic.

The subjects which are close to the tyrant are normally the spreaders of many superstition and false information surrounding the tyrant in pursuit to induce fear in the people.
